Last week I got the chance to check out the latest member of the X2 Resorts family here in Thailand -- the X2 Vibe Bangkok Sukhumvit Hotel!

I'll definitely be adding a full post on this hotel to my collection of Bangkok hotel reviews eventually, but here's a brief rundown of what I loved:

- It's a playful and fun Thai-owned hospitality group
- The Vibe hotels are SO affordable, this one was about $45 a night!
- This hotel was steps away from the On Nut BTS station. Staying close to the Skytrain is a must for me in Bangkok!
- It was a little further East than where I usually stay in the city, which ended up being super convenient for getting to the airport and the concert we were heading to at the National Stadium (more on that soon!)

This location was more modern and affordable than the luxurious X2 I stayed at in Koh Samui -- hoping to check out their Hua Hin or River Kwai locations sometime in the future, too!
